YAHWEH-'EL, "GOD CREATES"

Almost half a century ago W.F. Albright noticed already that YHWH is a verbal form of hwh or hyh, "to be", but he did not develop this idea.

According to the grammar of Biblical Hebrew the word Yahweh is the third person masculine singular of the hifil present. The form corresponds exactly to yagleh, chosen as typical example of this form and type of verbs chosen by P. Joüon in the Grammaire de l'hébreu biblique, Rome 1947, p. 19* (yglh). Yahweh can thus be translated by "He causes to be, to exist", "He brings into being", thus "He creates". The causative yhwh had probably a meaning somewhat different from bārā in Gen. 1, 1: "In the beginning God created heaven and earth". Based on the root "to be", yhwh could refer to the existence of the universe. The translation "He creates" would therefore be approximate.

The Hebrew verb bārā is not attested before the first millennium B.C. It was probably formed from Aramaic bar "son", just like banā, "to build", is based on ben, "son". The earliest attestation of yhwh with its subject 'l is attested in Egyptian at Soleb, in Sudan, in the 14th century B.C.

The inscription T3-Š3sw Y-h-w3-3 occurs twice in a "geographical" list from the temple of Soleb, built by Amenophis III (1392-1354 B.C.)¹, and it appears in a single copy from the reign of Ramesses II (1290-1223 or 1279-1212 B.C.), found at Amāra-West. The inscriptions of Soleb were published by J. Leclant². The inscription from Amāra-West N 97 was published by

H.W. Fairman³. The three inscriptions are included in R. Giveon's work, *Les Bédouins Shasou*⁴.

The Bedouins are qualified there by Y-h-w3-3 which designates a place not in Sudan, but most likely in the northern part of the Sinai Peninsula from which they were penetrating in Egypt. Their mention just records that they have been vanquished by the Egyptians, not that they were living in Sudan.

The spelling of the name implies the presence of the weak consonant l at its end, thus Yhwh-l. Considering the meaning of yhwh, "he creates", the subject must obviously be 'El. This is no simple hypothesis, since the full biblical theonym Yhwh-l is preserved in Gen. 16, 9⁵, where no preposition 'l is written after Yhwh; it would be superfluous. 'El is the second element of the theonym YAHWEH-EL, as shown by some Greek manuscripts and by the Vetus Latina. In fact, they translate Κύριος ὁ Θεός, Dominus Deus, and a Hebrew manuscript introduced here 'l*hym* to clarify the situation. The original text was thus Yhwh-l, corresponding to the Egyptian spelling Y-h-w3-3, which must stand for Yahwe-'Il*⁶, since 3 can indicate a Semitic l/r, like in the name of Jerusalem, spelled 3wš3mm in the Execration Texts⁷ (e 27, e 28,

⁶ E. Lipiński, On the Skirts of Canaan in the Iron Age (OLA 153), Leuven 2006, p. 362-366, with further literature. Ia-wi-DINGIR or Ia-wi-I-la occur frequently as Amorite personal names around the 16th century B.C.: Th. Bauer, Die Ostkanaanäer, Leipzig 1926, p. 31; M. Birot, in ARM XVI/1. Répertoire analytique, Paris 1979, p. 237; I.J. Gelb et al., Computer-aided Analysis of Amorite, Chicago 1980, p. 74-75. These names cannot be explained by the root hwy, "to live", as proposed by some authors, because its h is indicated in Amorite names by signs with h, either in the middle of the names, e.g. in Ya-ah-wi-Illu (ARM VII, 25, 5), or as their first phoneme, e.g. Ha-a-ia-a-bu-um (ARM XIII, 28, 4) or Ha-a-ià-i-lu-ù (ARM XIII, 146, 5). Cf. H.B. Huffmon, Amorite Personal Names in the Mari Texts, Baltimore 1965, p. 191-192. It is useless to discuss hypotheses which are not supported by Akkadian or Egyptian sources of the second millennium B.C.

f 18, E 45). Y-h-w3-3 is presumably an old traditional spelling. At any rate, a final r/l is sometimes omitted in proper names written syllabically. As seen here above, Y-h-w3-3 is formed by a short sentence, the verb of which is the causative of hwy, “to be”, meaning “He creates”, literally “He causes something to be”. The subject is the common Semitic noun ’l, “God”.

In the early Iron Age certain names in ’El have been abridged, losing the element ’El. Joseph-’El, attested already in the Egyptian Execration Texts of the 19th-18th centuries B.C., was then written Yisip-i or ’Isip-i (e 31; f 21; E 12), since final l was not indicated at that time. It was later signified by the hieroglyph transliterated r/l. In the “geographic” list of Tuthmosis III of the 15th century B.C., Joseph-’El was written Y-š3-p-i-r or *Y-š3-p-i-3-r*⁸, while the name of Jacob-’El, was Y-’q-b-i-r or *Y-’q-b-r*⁹. Like Joseph, Jacob-’El attested in the 15th century B.C., becomes Jacob, while Yahweh-’El became Yahweh¹⁰.

While Joseph and Jacob became personal names in biblical times, this could not happen in the case of Yahweh, because of the meaning “He creates” of the verbal form. This qualification of ’El became a theonym and it was shortened to Yhw or yh in personal names. His holy place was most likely Mount Yahweh (Numb. 10, 33), which was a central mountain of the area of the Shasou Bedouins, close to Seir, what is confirmed by Egyptian inscriptions.

The cult of Yahweh-’El could have some particularities which may have influenced the liturgy in ’El’s sanctuaries in the North, but this could hardly be checked in the Bible. The study of F. Pfitzmann, *Un YHWH venant du Sud ?*¹¹, seems therefore to rest on a hypothetical origin of YHWH, which we propose to regard as a verbal qualification of “’El (who) creates”.

¹⁰ However, Yahweh Elohīm, attested between Gen. 2, 4b and 3, 23, as well as in some later biblical passages (I Chron. 14, 16; 28, 20; II Chron. 1, 9; 6, 41; 26, 18), might also refer to “God (who) creates”, but other explanations have been proposed for this combined theonym.
